

“Which Way Did They Go?”

Keynote Speech

Millie McNabb, B.A., B.Mus., Founder, Christian Values Legacy

It's scary as a parent to see the number of children who were raised in Christian homes forsaking their Christian values. Millie gives insights into how to keep children from wandering off, and offers strategies for parents who are raising Christian children now.

The Bible talks about God selecting David to lead his people. David had a close relationship with God, leadership skills that he had learned while tending the sheep, and a “heart after God.” Although our children will ultimately make their own choice about whether or not to follow God, there are learnable skills that Millie shares to influence their decisions. “So [David] shepherded them according to the integrity of his heart, and guided them with his skillful hands” (Psalm 78:72.)

Many parents feel inadequate to teach spiritual and moral values to their children. Millie teaches techniques and skills that can be implemented to add the spiritual dimension to what you are already doing.

- Your home can be the place your children confidently turn to for help and answers.
- You can save time by training attitudes, not just behavior.
- You can give your children lifelong tools for making Godly choices.

“Growing up I always knew that I could ask Mom and Dad anything and they would give me a truthful answer on any topic. I grew up knowing about life and death and why as a Christian I didn’t need to be afraid of what was to come. All these things were ingrained in my up-bringing and I have carried these teachings into my adult life. I use these teachings in my daily life and with the children that I watch.”

--Margaret Schnitzler (Millie’s daughter)
